

SHORT ORDER

THE MIAMI NEW TIMES FOOD BLOG

Musings

Miami Executive Chefs Among Highest Paid

By Paula Niño, Thu., Jul. 29 2010 @ 12:16PM

Comments (4)

Categories: Musings

3

A salary survey of 1,400 culinary professionals by StarChefs.com shows that Miami and New York executive chefs were paid more in 2009 than their counterparts in other U.S. cities. The average salary for an executive chef here was reported at $101,400 -- not far from New York's $101,500 and about $14,000 more than salaries in Boston.

Revisorweb via wikimedia commons

Pastry chefs in Florida didn't do badly either. With an average salary of $55,000, local pastry chefs were paid more in 2009 than pastry chefs in Massachusetts, California, and New York. Sunshine State chefs de cuisine, however, were paid less. Their $49,300 average salary was between $13,000 and $18,000 lower than in the other three states.

What do you think, Miami culinary pros? Seem accurate?

Tags:

StarChefs.com

Related Content

- Big Money on Top at Marri-Dade County Hall August 13, 2009
- Most County Executives Safe from Budget Cuts August 14, 2009
- Fewer Law men February 16, 2006
- Letters from the Issue of October 1, 2009 October 1, 2009
- Blunt Trauma January 20, 2005

More About:

- Jobs and Labor
- Employee Compensation

Most Popular Stories

Viewed	Commented	Recent